

Direct your students to after-hours study help

Students have always studied after hours, before hours, after a shift, after the kids are in bed, on weekends, over breaks...

That's why study support is 24/7 as well.

The university provides access to Studiosity to ensure students always feel supported, to improve core academic literacy, numeracy, and integrity skills, and to build confidence. The university partners with Studiosity for after-hours study support, because of the service's robust privacy, integrity, and quality assurance policies.

Your Studiosity service is available via the student login. There is no public or individual access, ensuring that students only look for approved resources within university spaces.

What support is delivered?

Students will receive feedback around academic skills, English-writing skills, maths, sciences, research, and referencing. The support will never cover curricula content, and the 'help not answers' policy ensures students will be prompted to come to their own conclusions.

Students can choose to:

- a. Upload any assignment draft for same-day, English-writing feedback.
- b. Connect live to a Maths, Science, or English Subject Specialist, for when students need help 'right now' after hours.
- c. Connect to a more senior student at your university, for on-demand peer-to-peer discussions. Available at selected institutions.

Your role in encouraging help seeking

There is no more respected authority than a student's own lecturer and trusted support contacts.

You can:

- + Remind your students to find Studiosity in their student login.
- + Add a mini-modification to the curricula, instructing students to get writing feedback the week before their assignment is due, so that they have time to consider the feedback.
- + Add a reminder about all the university's support services to assignment sheets, your out-of-office responses, and email signatures.
